The Odyssey of an American Charity
in Contemporary Tibet

PAMELA LOGAN

EASTERN TIBET is a place of rugged ranges and torrential rivers, home to the fierce Khampa rebels who tried for a decade to defeat China's army and win independence for Tibet. This book chronicles Logan's fourteen years there doing the impossible: assisting Tibetans under Chinese rule.

In this book, Logan shares her first-hand experience working in education, health care, job training, disaster relief, reforestation, and cultural heritage. She tells about the diverse Tibetans she knew; she documents the many obstacles they face as ethnic minorities in China, and the impact of Chinese migrants pouring into their homeland.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Pamela Logan studied aerospace at Caltech and Stanford, and taught college-level aeronautical engineering, before setting aside her technical career to explore Asia. After working for the China Exploration & Research Society repairing Buddhist monasteries in Tibet, in 1997 she started Kham Aid Foundation, a nonprofit with the mission of bringing development and humanitarian assistance to people in the Tibetan region of Kham. She is the author of two previous books about Tibet, one of which, Among Warriors, was a New York Times Notable Book.
